Please add my name to the list of citizens opposed to the ACTA petition to stop companies from selling software and hardware products that let people use the Internet to make long-distance calls. It is truly in the public's interest to allow citizens the ability to make calls without having the phone companies profit from the use of a technology that competes with them.

I urge the FCC to protect the rights of the consumer for inexpensive, worldwide communication.

Deny RM8775, ACTA Internet Phone Petition.

Times change. Businesses come and go. Growth and change are absolutely necessary. The rights of the consumers for low cost, completely open, unrestricted communication is paramount.

We have the technology that is affordable to be the most knowledgeable country in the world. Don't let the telephone companies take that away from us!

Please do not kill the baby before it's even born !!

Internet, as we see today (highly successful) is because it has been allowed to grow without any interference. I have never heard of US Postal Services complain about loss in revenues because of people using E-mail instead of snail-mail !!

Give the new technology (internet telephony and all those net-phones) a chance. The technology will die its own death if it's not able to meet people expectations but PLEASE do not become a reason for its death.

So many programmers must have spent days and night working on these products to make their dream come true. Lot of time and effort has gone into this technology. PLEASE do not discourage them. PLEASE !!

Keep the phone companies etc away from free net access. This is a major change in the way people will communicate that will help the growth of the economy of the world. Don't let the phone companies, etc profit off of what should be in the hands of the ISP's. It will only drastically increase consumer costs for no good reason but greed on the part of the phone co's. Thank you John Bravo Scranton PA
